FATHER DARKLEAF

Advertising is the spark keeping the ball rolling.

It has ever and always been a bit difficult to tell for sure just who are enemies and who are friends. The story is told of an officer in charge of a British station in the heart of Africa who got an urgent message from London. The message said:—"War declared. Arrest all enemy aliens." With commendable promptness, he wired back:- "Have arrested 7 Germans, 3 Belgians, 2 Frenchmen, 4 Italians, 1 Austrian, and 3 Americans. Please advise with whom we are at war."

I was in a place that works quite a number of people. I walked in and not a soul was in sight. As I looked at my watch, and it was three minutes until eight, I walked out front and noted a few people moving out, and ere I could get back inside again it was one minute after eight, and all hands were on the job at work! I have never beheld such a feat of timing! Nobody, but nobody and then of a sudden, all hands present. I understand that goes on all over. People keep their eyes on the clock. The idea seems to be: not one minute early and if possible not one minute late. Well, I am a working man, so best not get too stirred up about it. I happen to work for a tough boss. I work for myself. Cooling my heels is one thing I never cherished. They say the guy who keeps his eye on the clock will always be one of the hands. To do a good job is more important than to "put in hours."

FIREBLIGHT UNUSUALLY WIDESPREAD THIS YEAR

Fireblight—a disease which affects pears, apples, and other related ornamentals, is unusually abundant in Virginia this year, reports J. M. Amos, associate plant pathologist at VPI.

Many reports have been received from home fruit growers as well as commercial apple growers, Amos says.

Fireblight causes a dying back of the branches, sometimes as much as three or four feet or more. At this time of year, there is little to be done to control it other than to prune out the affected branches. This removes the course of infection and prevents spread to other tender leaf shoots. Amos suggests cutting all branches 6 to 8 inches below the last visible point of infection so all infection will be removed. The pruned branches should be burned.

Recent experiments have shown that spraying about the time 10% of the blossoms are in bloom, followed by another spray about full-bloom, and possibly another at petal-fall, with one of the zineb compounds will effectively control the disease.

VPI SPECIALISTS GIVE TIPS FOR LIVESTOCK MEN

Several seasonal tips for livestock men have been listed by animal husbandmen at VPI.

For instance, if you're keeping ewe lambs for replacements, worm the lambs until they are five months old or weigh 80 to 90 pounds. Keep them separate from other sheep. They should be treated for worms once a month from weaning time until late November.

Sheepmen had considerable trouble with maggots both in lambs and mature sheep last year. More trouble can be expected during wet weather, and also when the sheep graze in tall grass and stay damp from the morning dew. To help prevent this trouble, spray or dip the sheep occasionally with the same materials used to control other external parasites. The treatment is described in Bulletin 191, "Prospect with Sheep," available from county agents, or from the VPI Agricultural Extension Service, Blacksburg.

YOU CAN HAVE YOUR CAKE AND EAT IT TOO

Do you like birds — and strawberries — and the two don't seem to get along together?

There is a way to beat the game. John Amos, Extension Service specialist at VPI, says to use a one-inch poultry mesh wire over the tops of beds of strawberries, raspberries, and other home grown fruits, or to use a netting made of cord.

The mesh should not be greater than one inch, and can be stretched over small trees or berries which need protection. In some cases it might be advisable to use cheese cloth, especially if the fruits ripen when Japanese beetles are flying, and you're in an area bothered with the pest.

At first the cost of the cord netting may seem rather high, but if it is cared for and stored properly, it should last for 10 years or more: and the cost spread over this period of time would not be much, and likely will pay off when used on many plants.

A large crowd is expected to enjoy the Fourth of July holiday weekend at nearby Holliday Lake.

Population Rises at Fast Rate

The population of the United States is growing at such a rapid pace the estimated increase by 1975 will equal the present total of the 22 states west of the Mississippi River.

These 22 states have a population of nearly 52 million. The U. S. Census Bureau has estimated that by 1975 the country will have a population of 200 to 220 million, which would represent a gain of 40 million in the next 21 years.

These figures are spectacular in themselves, a recent study by the National Association of Manufacturers points out, but they are even less in turning the spotlight of public attention on how much economy must expand in order to support the huge gain in population.

The study shows, that there is no foreseeable limit on our capacity to produce if we have the incentives, and if we use our physical resources intelligently.

The key to our expanding economy, as set forth in the NAM study, consists of strengthening the individual enterprise system, which "is the best system known for getting men to work together toward desirable goals and at the same time preserving individual freedom."

NAM economists found that a 70 per cent in real per capita income may be anticipated by 1975 "if our economy continues to provide incentives for people to produce, to invent, to invest, and to devise better ways of providing the increased goods and services our growing population will require."

If the 1975 goals are to be reached, millions of new jobs must be created, billions of new dollars of new capital invested, hundreds of thousands of new stores and business enterprises established.

The "major uncertainty," NAM said, is whether Americans adequately understand their economic system to "guard against changes which would weaken the incentives it provides for people to work and produce."

The NAM study "is based on the assumption that the people do value their individual enterprise system and will strengthen . . . not destroy . . . it in the coming years."

It is estimated that at least $265 billion in new and additional investment will be needed to provide jobs for the 22,000,000 more workers that will be in the work force by 1975. This figure is based on an estimate that a $12,000 investment lies behind the average job today, and that at least that amount will be needed to create jobs in the future.

DISTRACTIONS CAUSE ACCIDENTS

Distractions cause 75 per cent of all automobile accidents, according to a prominent woman traffic judge.

Window shopping, looking at pretty girls, settling squabbles among the children in the back seat, head-swiveling conversations with passengers, lighting a cigarette . . . these are the things that cause accidents, in the opnion of Judge Geraldine F. Macelwane, of the Toledo, Ohio Municipal Court.

Hearing 80 to 120 traffic violation cases a day, she qualifies as an expert on human behavior behind the wheel. In 1953, she heard 7,300 traffic cases.

"It takes only a second of distraction on the part of the driver to cause a serious injury or death," Judge Macelwane points out. "If a moving car is left unguided, even for a second, a serious accident can result."

She cited the example of a tearful and trembling young mother who recently appeared in her court. The mother had made the common mistake of allowing her small child to stand on the front seat beside her.

"As the driver of the car ahead signalled an intention to turn left, the child diverted the mother's attention for an instant...long enough for the car ahead to stop for oncoming traffic," Judge Macelwane said. "The woman crashed into it the child required hospital treatment, and she was haled into my court on a reckless driving charge."

Improving the driver's knowledge and attitudes is more important than punitive action in such cases, Judge Macelwane believes.

"Although women can rally public support for enforcement and engineering advances, then can be even more effective in reducing accidents by focusing attention on more common dangers, like distraction," she says.

GROW, CAN AND SERVE TOMATOES

Plan for at least 30 quarts of tomatoes per person. (A bushel cans about 20 quarts). This means about 6 plants per person. Use cold-pack method for home canning. Tomatoes do not freeze well, but juice may be frozen. (Heat, briefly, before straining). Make catsup and chili sauce for home use.

Use tomatoes at least four times a week. Heat and air destroy vitamin C (ascorbic acid) so cook as short time as possible in covered pans. Tomato juice for breakfast, tomato soup for lunch, tomato salad for dinner, sandwiches any time.
